Cousin Daisy's Advice

By HONORE SISSON

Aloysia had always believed that Arles was the most important place in the world, because it was the only place she had ever known anything about. She had been born there, and had lived there every one of her twenty-six years of her uneventful life. Her mother felt just as she did. Her mother was a widow—a timid retiring little soul, who constantly hid herself in her home. She had made a few friends and acquaintances, with whom she was not very intimate, but they sufficed her. She went to church regularly, and sat very humbly in an unobserved corner. And Aloysia sat with her.

The girl reflected her mother's attitude toward the world in general. She trembled if she so much as touched elbows with Arles great ones. Sometimes as she sat downcast, apparently attentive to the preacher's every word, she was in reality observing the people about her. There was Mrs. Forbes in her stylish rustling black, who came late and walked up the aisle as if she owned the whole church edifice; and there was Miss Corbin, very haughty and very correctly gowned, who had gone to school with Aloysia, and had since forgotten her very existence; there was Mrs. Blackeney and Anna Morris and Miss Bush, the popular milliner, who advertised her wares by wearing a new hat every Sunday—all these were Arles best persons, to be beheld with awe by such as Aloysia and her mother, who were distinctly insignificant and unworthy of notice, who went nowhere and wore clothes fashioned badly from those which were passed on to them by a certain invisible cousin Daisy. In their simplicity, attributed great wealth, because she was able to have a new hat and gown each season. Besides sending them her castoff clothes cousin Daisy, whose husband was a lawyer in New York did not notice them. But their little claim upon her was their one pride and pretension.

Aloysia was conscious that she dressed badly and the people looked down on her for doing so. She and her mother owned their tiny house and had a bit of money in the bank. But they were never asked out to have any company. They read continually from the public library, and there was an old piano upon which Aloysia had learned to play. She sang a little too, old fashioned songs, which were suited to her light untrained voice. But what she and her mother really did was to make lace and they did this that they might live. They did exquisite work at absurdly low prices.

If Aloysia had but known, her life was sunless enough. As it was, she made the best of it, and turned to her music and her books for her diversion. Sometimes she played or read, vague, sweet dreams haunted her. For she had not come to twenty-six years without finding that she had a heart and a hero.

Her hero was Dick Churchill. Big, blonde, good, hearty, good-natured, Dick who liked everybody and whom everybody liked, but who was as far beyond her reach as the farthest star. She always saw him at church and occasionally during the week, but he never saw her. There were too many pretty, well dressed girls within close range of his vision. Yet somehow he did not tarry. It was said that he was waiting to get money enough to build a house before taking a wife.

The girls smiled at him in vain and Dick smiled back, aware of their smiles and knowing very well that whenever he got ready he could take his pick of the lot. Aloysia knew that too, but so long as he was unattached it was sufficient delight for her to admire the poise of his head and the clear brown of his cheek and the fine line of his chin as he sat sideways to her in church.

But Dick never knew. Nor would he have cared if he had. After all she was just a pale little young thing of a girl who wore abominable black hats that might have done for old Mrs. Jessup, who was 70 years old and dependent for the charity of the church.

Thus Aloysia lived, and it seemed likely she was to live thus for the rest of her remaining years, when suddenly her mother was stricken with a sharp little pain in her left side and within an hour was dead.

Aloysia's first thought was of her Cousin Daisy. The stress of necessity lent her boldness. She had a telegram sent telling Daisy what had happened and asking her to come. Then she waited in the blackness of awful grief and uncertainty. Next day Cousin Daisy came. She was a big, florid woman, full of energy and worldly wisdom.

"You did right to send for me dear," she said, for the sight of Aloysia's stricken face touched her heart, how ever deeply it was buried under folds of silk and lace. "You knew I'd come I said to my husband: 'Ed, that child needs me and I'm going.' And I came. Now, you leave everything to me."

Aloysia was only too glad. She did not question Cousin Daisy's judgment and ability, and, when after the funeral, cousin Daisy asked the girl to accompany her home, Aloysia went.

New York was a revelation to Aloysia. For the first few days she lived in a whirl of swiftly changing impressions and startling discoveries. She was terrified, distracted, astonished, at what she saw. The change from quite Arles had come so suddenly that it was as if she had been swept from one world to another. Yet it was a good thing for her. It dulled her sorrow and kept her from thinking. Cousin Daisy was disposed to be very kind to her in much the same way that she would have been kind to a half-dozen, half-starved kittens which she had rescued from the street. For the moment Aloysia interested her.

"Now, you know," she said, "you can't go out until you have some clothes. Those you have might do for Arles, but you must remember you are in New York now."

Aloysia had some money and she gave it to Daisy to spend for her.

"No black on you, my dear," said that lady, "why you've been weeping mourning all your life; it is time you had a change. I wear black because I'm stout and highly colored and it's becoming to me, and you've worn it because I sent it to you and you had to. Black is the worst thing you could put on. What you want is red—rich, dark red, and plenty of it."

So Cousin Daisy bought her a long red coat with a big fur collar, and a big red hat and a veil, and a red dress. Lastly came shoes and gloves that were small enough, but these had to come out of Cousin Daisy's money, for Aloysia's was quite gone.

"And to think you've been wearing my shoes, with feet like that," Daisy said, laughing. She dressed Aloysia up very much as she would have dressed a doll and admired the effect she had produced. "And now," she concluded, "you want to do your hair over a rat, and use powder on your nose, and a little—a very little—rouge on your cheeks to relieve their pallor. 'Rouge isn't wicked,' she added firmly, as Aloysia opened wide her eyes. "Neither is powder or anything else that helps nature out a little with a woman's looks."

But in spite of all Cousin Daisy's kindness and all the bewildering charm of her new clothes, Aloysia began after a time to get very homesick. She endured the feeling as long as she could in silence and then she spoke.

"I want to go home," she said. Cousin Daisy had become a little tired of Aloysia as a diversion. Warm weather was coming on and the flat was small. Besides she considered that she had done her whole duty by Aloysia.

"Well," she said, "you can go of course, my dear, but what are you going to do when you get there?"

"I shall go on making lace, I suppose," Aloysia said sighing.

"And get old and blind before your time, and lose any chance of marrying you might have here? Now see here, Aloysia, said Cousin Daisy impressively, "if I were you I'd rent that house and take a room somewhere and board. Don't you know enough to sell things over a counter, my dear?"

"I don't know," faltered Aloysia.

"Then we'll see," said Daisy. "I'm going home with you."

In two days Cousin Daisy had accomplished all that she had set herself to accomplish. She had the house rented and Aloysia established in a nice family. Moreover, she had secured for Aloysia a place in one of the stores as saleswoman.

"Now," she said to the girl, "there's six dollars a week for you from the store, and two from the house, and you're only paying out four. You'll get along I guess."

Aloysia had no time to be lonely after Daisy departed, for her time was fully occupied with her new interests. She got through her first day at the store creditably. She was beginning to have confidence in herself. New York and Cousin Daisy had done wonders for her. When she looked in the glass she hardly knew the stylish young woman she saw there.

At the dinner table the first night at her boarding place she looked up, startled, to see Dick Churchill sitting down opposite her. Presently the landlady introduced them.

"We're a small family here," she said comfortably, and we've got to get along. Dick looked across at Aloysia and for the first time in his life he really saw her. He smiled and she smiled back. They were friends at once.

A week later he had moved to a place beside hers, where they could talk in lower tones. That summer he began to build a house, with a veranda and balcony and many windows.

And that fall by the time the first leaves were falling all Arles knew that the house was being built for Aloysia. Dick had at last made his choice of a girl.

POPULATION CENTER

Likely to Remain Within the State of Indiana.

Indications Are That the New Census Will Not Move It Far—Wickersham and Nagel to Report on Alaska.

Washington.—Some spot in Indiana probably will mark the center of population of the United States for another ten years. It is worth while to emphasize the word "probably," because there is not available at this time very much definite information on which to base speculation as to where the center of population will be. The officials in the census bureau who have access to the population returns refuse to speculate at all. Outliers without a great deal of information in hand on which to base an opinion are disposed to predict that the "center" will not move very far from a point six miles southeast of Columbus, Ind., where it is now established.

The census figures so far made public show that there has been an enormous increase in population in the southwest during the last ten years. The northwest has also grown rapidly in population. If one examined the returns from the southwest and the northwest without taking into account the fact that the east has also increased its population within the last ten years, he would be inclined to say that the center of population would be pulled a considerable distance westward.

A fact worth bearing in mind is that the increases in population in the east cities, and it is true, of course, that there are more large cities in the east than in the west. Another fact that will undoubtedly have a bearing on the "center of population" is that the millions of immigrants who have come in during the last ten years have nearly all camped in the eastern section of the country.

By the census of 1900, the center of population is in the following position:

Latitude, 39 degrees, 9 minutes, 36 seconds.

Longitude, 85 degrees, 45 minutes, 54 seconds.

This particular spot, as is generally known, is at a point six miles southeast of Columbus, Ind., and is marked by a monument. In the ten years from 1890 to 1900, the center of population moved westward 16 minutes and 1 second, or about 14 miles, and southward 2 minutes and 20 seconds, or about 2 1/2 miles.

It is a comparatively easy matter to ascertain the center of population after the total count of the people of the country is known. This total count for the thirteenth census will not be known before the 1st of October, and possibly not before the 1st of November.

Center Moves Westward.

The center of population has moved almost due westward since 1790, when it was at a point 23 miles east of Baltimore. From 1790 to 1890, it moved almost due west to a point 18 miles west of Baltimore. In the next ten years, from 1890 to 1900, it moved westward and slightly southward to a point about 40 miles northwest of Washington, D. C. That slight deviation toward the south was accounted for by the annexation of the territory of Louisiana. From 1810 to 1820, it took up its march westward again, with another slight deviation to the south, and brought up 16 miles north of Woodstock, Va. In the ten years between 1820 and 1870, it continued to move westward until it halted at a point about 19 miles southwest of Missouri, in what is now the state of West Virginia.

Between 1830 and 1840 there was a slight movement northward and the "point" was located 16 miles south of Clarkburg. In the present state of West Virginia. In the next ten years, 1840 to 1850, it moved west and slightly southward again and halted 23 miles southeast of Parkersburg. In what is now West Virginia. Between 1850 and 1860 there was a second slight bending toward the north, and it reached a point 20 miles south of Chillicothe, O.

The sharpest turn northward was between 1860 and 1870, when it reached a point 48 miles east by north of Cincinnati. During the succeeding ten years, between 1870 and 1880, it veered to the south slightly again and reached a point eight miles west by south of Cincinnati.

In the next ten years it moved back to practically the same latitude it occupied in 1870, and in 1890 was located at a point 20 miles east of Columbus, Ind. During the ten years between 1890 and 1900 the "center" moved westward a little less than three miles, and as has already been stated halted at a point six miles southeast of Columbus, Ind. This movement between 1890 and 1900 was the smallest in one hundred years.

cupied in 1870, and in 1890 was located at a point 20 miles east of Columbus, Ind. During the ten years between 1890 and 1900 the "center" moved westward a little less than three miles, and as has already been stated halted at a point six miles southeast of Columbus, Ind. This movement between 1890 and 1900 was the smallest in one hundred years.

FEDERAL IRRIGATION INQUIRY.

E. Dana Durand, director of the census, is seeking the advice of all persons possessing first-hand knowledge of the subject of irrigation with a view to devising a schedule of inquiries which will elicit adequate information concerning the extent and effect of that system of reclaiming land for the purpose of agriculture. This census or investigation was ordered by congress in act amending the census law passed last February. Under its provisions the director is ordered to ascertain the area of irrigated lands in the arid regions of the country; whether such irrigation is carried on under state or federal laws; the prices at which irrigated lands, including water rights, are obtainable; the character and value of crops produced upon them; the amount of water used for an acre; the situation of the various irrigation enterprises, together with a description of their methods of construction, their physical conditions and the amount of capital invested therein.

In taking the agricultural census, the field work for which has just been completed, the census office furnished the enumerators with a supplementary schedule relating to irrigation. These questions, however, did not develop all the information asked for congress, and nine different schedules are being prepared for special agents of the census bureau. In connection with these new schedules the director is asking the advice of government and state officials, corporations, experts and the special agents themselves, who have been selected because of their special fitness to do the work.

INVESTIGATING ALASKA AFFAIRS.

Washington.—Attorney General Wickersham and Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel have not gone to Alaska for their health. What may be termed the "Alaskan situation" is giving President Taft much concern. He desires that these two members of his cabinet shall lift to the bottom numerous controversies with respect to the government of the territory.

After they have studied the situation first hand he wants them to tell him what they think of his plan of having congress install, the commission form of government up there. He wanted congress to provide this new form of government at the recent session; at his suggestion Senator Beveridge, chairman of the senate committee on territories, introduced a reorganization bill, but so much opposition developed that the legislation was temporarily abandoned.

Attorney General Wickersham.

The president wants to know, too, whether there is anything in these stories that a syndicate in which J. Pierpont Morgan and the Guggenheim brothers are the influential factors, is in a fair way to gain possession of about everything of value in the territory. Then there are numerous local quarrels that have been brought to the attention of the president.

Of course, the broad question relates to the future of the territory. It is incumbent on this administration to adopt a general policy with reference to the territory—a policy that may be safely followed for a generation to come. In adopting a general policy the question as to how the vast wealth of the territory is to be dealt with must be settled. Is it to be locked up for generations to come, or is it to be made available for the use of the present and succeeding generations under proper restrictions?

Messrs. Wickersham and Nagel expect to spend at least a month in the territory. They are under instructions to visit as many parts of it as they can in that time. James Wickersham (not related to the attorney general), the territorial delegate in congress, wants home rule for the territory and introduced a bill providing for an elective legislature of 24 members—four representatives and two senators from each judicial district.

Wickersham says the territory has more coal than Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio; more gold than California and Colorado put together, and more copper than Montana and Michigan. The prize is the greatest within the gift of the United States, he asserts.

Entered as SECOND-CLASS MATTER June 21, 1902, at RICHMOND, CALIFORNIA, under the ACT OF CONGRESS OF MARCH 3, 1879.

SATURDAY, September 17, 1910.

GET YOUR CONGRESSMAN TO VOTE FOR SAN FRANCISCO-1915

The Terminal is Republican.

That name, Johnson, appears to be a winner this year.

Insurgency is taking over the Democrats in a body.

Bell-Spellacy may spell Bell Fallacy before the close of this campaign.

Is it not splendid sailing? Republicans and Democrats in an insurgent boat with Hiram of Ty—no, d— it, he is from San Francisco—for pilot. Democrats, get in, your fare is paid.

POLITICAL.

John Murray, is the incumbent constable of Fifteenth Township, and has made a good record in that capacity. You know where Murray stands. He pitches his tent in his own premises and never tries to capture the plans and fortifications of the enemy. He is not a bushwhacker. The unions know where he stands and his party affiliations are known, and he economically has administered his office which, he says follows the flag and if elected, he will hold his office where he is put, and will stay 'put' and 'Johnny on the spot.' His card appears in the Terminal.

Clarence Odell, Esq., who conducts a law office in the Post office Building on Macdonald Avenue, is the regular Republican nominee for the office of Justice of the Peace. Mr. Odell by knowledge of the law and by experience is well qualified to sit on the bench. He has filled the office of police judge, until, by some "hocus pocus," his name was omitted from the roll of appointments by the present city council, and without any malfeasance accusations either. Mr. Odell can fill the office with credit if his pole reaches that persimmon. The Record-Herald, a democratic organ, speaks kind words for Odell.

A. N. Sullenger, incumbent in the office of county auditor, is a democrat, but not partisan; is a member of the Retail Clerks' union and carries a paid-up card. He has an enviable record in the office which he now holds, having caused the collection of thousands of dollars of back taxes and he has performed other deeds of honesty that has given him a county wide reputation. Mr. Sullenger is loved for the enemies he has made, as was said by General Bragg of the late Grover Cleveland when the latter was nominated for the presidency in 1884. Al Sullenger has not developed the swelled head and is no snob; although he has held office nearly one term, he greets the people just the same, as a public servant. The Republican insurgents, so say his friends, will rally to his support, for the insurgents will not throw over a public official of the Al Sullenger type if they know it. Mr. Sullenger's card heads the list in the Terminal.

Hon. Charles J. Rihn, who has filled the unexpired term of the late Patrick Tormey, by virtue of election on the Republican and Union Labor tickets, is out for re-election. During his term Mr. Rihn has widened and graded San Pablo Road, and macadamized it; also, he macadamized the east end of Cutting boulevard to the Southern Pacific Railway and Twenty-Third Street north-westerly to the limits to the city of Richmond, thus completing the missing link to Macdonald all avenue, opening the gateway to a great commercial traffic from Oakland, the County Line and the Pullman center to the growing business center on the avenue, and besides will widen, grade and macadam Macdonald avenue from the Twenty-Third Street center to San Pablo avenue. He used his good offices for Good Roads Bonds and had upon the Advisory Board for Richmond, G. A. Follett, Esq., whose record is well known. Mr. Rihn submits his case to the people without argument, solely upon his record in office.

BIG DOINGS OF BIG PEOPLE

Twenty car loads of machinery are being loaded at Denver to be placed in the big shops, near Wall street, Richmond.

The Oakland Gas, Light and Heat Company is making wonderful progress with its big system and the main headquarters will be on Macdonald Avenue, between Fifth and Sixth Streets.

Wells Fargo Express Company is looking for a central office on Macdonald Avenue, near Seventh street, and negotiations may soon be closed for space on the ground floor in the Monadnock Building, this city.

The Bay Cities Water Company under the Tevis financing, is weaving a net around the People's. The Bay Cities headquarters will be in an office on Macdonald avenue at Sixth, or Seventh Street, the center of the service.

EDWARD CHAMBERS DROPS SOME HINTS

Edward Chambers, Esq., Assistant Traffic Director of the Santa Fe, and a large stockholder of the First National Bank, with George Wall, Esq., of Wall Addition to Richmond, visited Richmond a few days ago, having autoed over from San Francisco. Mr. Chambers said that Richmond has every appearance of a very healthful, steady growth. He expressed himself as agreeably surprised with the great progress on Macdonald avenue. He said that between the two overland depots there would soon be a very crowded population and the growth would rapidly move eastward, and then the Twenty-Third Street and Pullman centers will have marvelous growth and a heavy traffic will become the future attraction along Wall Street north to Macdonald in the wonderful great city in San Pablo Valley.

KNOWLAND TALKS INNER HARBOR

Congressman Joe Knowland was the guest of honor, this week, of Richmond city council, the Merchants' association, Board of Trade on a tour of inspection of the proposed inland water way, or channel into our city; to inspect and to confer upon our city's possibilities for the improvement by the United States government; to secure a preliminary survey toward the opening of better facilities for river and bay shipping; to have a way for river boats to land river boats in the center of the city's population.

The party made a detour of the city in automobiles and accepted the invitation of Superintendent S. Berndt to be the guests of the California Wine Association at Hotel de Winehaven, where the genial hotel manager, F. B. Loop, had placed covers for thirty-five. Hon. R. K. Veale was also present and every one enjoyed his presence.

At Knowland's after dinner address he was agreeably surprised to see the wonderful growth of Richmond since his last visit and he was pleased to see the largest wine industry in the world, "The Home of Calwa," in his district. The Congressman predicted that by 1915 Richmond Channel would be completed and that Richmond would then be ready to receive her share of the Panama trade.

TOWN TALK

Subscribe for the TERMINAL.
It is all one city now. Find the city.

Richmond has industry all around and business in the middle.
The Brown-Andrade tract will have some city street work done.

Another automobile garage is talked for Seventh Street.
Another daily paper is contemplated. It will be called the "Daily Tooter."

A fine machine—Hot Pea nuts and Pop corn every day—Tennessee Store.

The woman's Improvement Club of Richmond have started a campaign of street tree transplanting.

The street work on Seventh Street makes of this way a very pretty drive or walk.

The new First National Bank of Richmond shows resources to the amount of $253,531.14.

The Pullman Car Manufacturing Company is making grand success with the big works near Wall St. Boulevard.

We are getting trade from Pt. Richmond, Siege and San Pablo—Why? They get quality goods and cheaper. Tennessee Store.

Creason's garage is a busy place. If you want to stop on the avenue, that is the place to take your "Honk! Honk!"

McEwen Bros found some flaws in the Ohio Street proposed improvement but Contractor J. J. Davis will put in the work.

If the families coming from Denver have no house room in Richmond, how would Richmond like to have them live elsewhere? Carpenters, get busy.

The Dammand building will soon be transformed into a barber shop and bath place. Four barbers contemplate opening the business and will have cut, manicure or shave you with only a short wait.

Richmond Amusement Company, under the management of Martin Kelly, has opened under very favorable auspices. The house is very crowded. The building has a very neat front with a lighted "Cladway."

Just received—large shipment of candy from New York City—Cocoa Bon Bons, Dole Creams, French Kisses, Fruit Drops, Fudge Creams etc. All goes at 15c per lb.—2 lbs. for 25c. Tennessee Store, 820 Macdonald Avenue.

Mr. Property Owner, Richmond, California: Dear Old Money Bags! One hundred families are moving from Denver to Richmond, representing the skilled labor to begin work for Pullman Car Manufacturing Co. Have you one hundred cottages ready?

The Marathon Candy Kitchen, which has just opened, presents one of the prettiest fronts in the city of Richmond. The sweet parlor, the ice cream department, the fruit corner, present an attractive appearance, day or evening, to the visitors on Macdonald avenue.

WINEHAVEN'S AFFAIRS
THE FIREMEN'S BALL

Winehaven is about to carry off another honor their second annual ball to be given by Richmond Volunteer Fire Department of that cozy and progressive port. Superintendent S. Berndt, F. B. Loop, K. Floyd, Charles Mahinko and Chief Bosse have planned the affair with many brilliant features in arrangements, reception and floor. The committees will spare no pains to make of the event the most enjoyable social function of the season. Our readers remember their "first annual" last year so if you would have bushels of fun this year just "drop yur knittin'" buy your ticket and make your date for East Shore Park, on the evening of October 18.

Refreshments will be served free all evening, a-la Winehaven, in the varied forms of lemonade, orangeade, pineappleade, and bananaade, and so on, nothing alcoholic. The password of the Winehaven firemen is: "Drink, but don't get funny."

It has been the good fortune of the Firemen to secure the Logan-Schwartz full orchestra. There will be offered two prizes for the best waltzers. Grand march goes forward at 8:30 p. m., sharp.

City News.

Mrs. John Banks from Oakland visited the Sells and Browns this week.

Still they come. Now there is talk of a ground floor dancing pavilion.

John Graham is opening up a business in roofing. He can keep the rain off your interiors.

What will those one hundred families who are coming from Denver to Richmond do for house room?

Talking about amusements, there is gossip about a howling alley near Sixth Street.

They say one of Richmond's cracker-jack bands may erect a shell and entertain some for the general public.

Property in Richmond is in good demand everywhere. Frank Thole & Son sold some choice lots this week.

Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Spagnoli and Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Parker and families have returned from a splendid outing in the Mendocino woods.

News Nuggets.

Richmond is growing and that's what they all say.

William Prentice is in Tonopah, where he was called on business.

The Terminal averages very well in subscriptions, thank you.

Frank Thole & Son have had several inquiries for factory locations. Look out for the man who attends to your own business for you.

It is rumored that Pullman will soon have a post-office. Gus Keller is mentioned for postmaster.

Trade at home. Keep your money within the city's circulation, and don't take in bad money.

Mrs. Warren B. Brown and daughter Eleanor Lorraine, visited Sacramento this week.

Henry Matty provides a pleasant amusement in his merry-go-round. About three hundred people attend every evening.

The Trachsler Building on the corner of Macdonald avenue and Sixteenth Street is ready for the enclosure.

The railroads give Richmond wonderfully fair rates in shipping, both the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe.

There is business on Macdonald avenue so our bankers say, and a wave of prosperity will soon put to rout the knockers, howlers and croakers.

Richmond's streets are almost ready for free postal delivery. The only thing lacking is for one post-office to aggregate $10,000 in gross receipts in one year.

Grand Theater has a better attendance than ever. The moving picture craze in Richmond is a wonder. The public wants to see all the shows.

Both Tilden & Eakle yard and Richmond Lumber Co. are busy filling orders for building materials for the great building movement.

Many of Richmond's population may have an opportunity to sleep out doors this winter, all the same tuberculosis cure. There will not be cottages enough to hold the people. There is a good demand for modern five, to seven-room cottages.

The Democrats held an enthusiastic meeting at the Opera House last night about 500 being present. D. W. Ravenscroft of Petaluma; Theodore Bell of Napa and Judge Bleasoe of San Bernardino delivered enthusiastic speeches. They talked like Republican insurgents.

President Clinton E. Worden of the First National Bank, with Cashier Cray inspecting the new $50,000 Bank building on the Sixth-st. corner. Mr. Worden was well pleased with the marvelous growth of the banking business which was not expected before moving into the new buildings. The trees that were planted by Architect Weeks were ordered cut down, as deposit-waiting their turn were breaking off the limbs.

Royal Maids' Lives.

All the maids at Buckingham palace wear pink frocks in the morning and must put on a fresh frock every day. In the afternoon the regulation black dress with cap and apron is worn, and the cap and apron must not be worn more than once.

Each maid is allowed, if she desires it, two days in the month when she can be out from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m., and she also gets a fortnight's holiday every year.

There are a certain number of maid servants who are put on what is called the traveling staff. It is the special duty of these maids to attend to the packing of the personal baggage of the queen, and they receive a special training in this work. At least two of these maids always travel with the royal suite whenever her majesty moves from one royal residence to another, though, of course, at each royal residence there is a separate permanent staff of maids, says Home Chat.

When her majesty pays a visit to any country house, two traveling maids accompany the royal suite, which is generally a small one, consisting of a couple of ladies-in-waiting and one or two other members of the household.

Too Great a Risk.

A certain gentleman who resides in Adelaide county, Kentucky, stopped with one of his friends for the night, and after his horse had been cared for at the barn, and fed, the following conversation occurred between the two old neighbors:

"Sam, have you got anything to drink?"

"Yes, Bill, I have about the quantity sufficient for us both to have a good drink in the morning."

"Sam," said Bill, "the older you get the less sense you have. Just suppose now the house burns down to-night, and we have barely enough time to save ourselves and the drinks perish. I want to tell you right now, Sam, that we are not going to run any such risk. We will take the drinks tonight."

Setting the Pace.

"Pacemaker at a banquet is what I should call the unique job," said the city salesman. "I met a man the other day who holds that title among the artistic eaters of the town."

"He doesn't make any money by it directly, but it pays for most of his bills." He got the job through his ability to chew at just the right tempo.

"He doesn't lag, he doesn't bolt. At all big dinners where persons of different habits are brought together some one with an even jaw movement who can set the pace in eating facilitates the progress of the meal."

"This man is not labeled pacemaker at those affairs, yet his air of knowing the polite tempo in mastication impresses the other diners and they try to imitate him. Laggards hurry, the swift delay. Waiters keep an eye on him, because they have been told to, and when he finishes a course they clear the table."

WAS ONE GREAT LARGE FOOL

German Applicant for Citizenship Gives His Opinion of Subject of Polygamy.

Herman Selferth, a wood turner from Germany, was among the first of a score of applicants seeking "papers" from a federal judge in Kansas recently. Herman had been in America seven years, and his conversation, albeit a trifle warped, was quite understandable.

So it was with no great effort that the judge and others understood Herman solemnly to assert that liberty was the capital of Missouri and that Abraham Lincoln was the first president of the United States.

So far, so good. The questions of law and morals proved a bit more difficult.

"What do you think of polygamy?" the assistant district attorney inquired.

"Not is?" parried the examinee, puzzled.

"Polygamy—polygamy," the interlocutor repeated. "Do you believe it is right, proper and lawful?"

Herman was stumped. There appeared to be no word in the lexicon of the Vaterland that sounded enough like polygamy to give Herman even a false start.

The judge ventured a hint.

"What do you think of a man that would have several wives at the same time?" the court asked.

That was easy. Herman looked vastly relieved.

"Oh," he rejoined, positively. "I think such a man would be one great, large fool." And the court was so well satisfied with Herman's moral attitude and high intention that the "papers" were forthcoming despite the applicant's minor inaccuracies in history and geography.

MAN ALWAYS GIVING ADVICE

Is Effectually Squelched by Tattered Hobo in Most Characteristic Manner.

The man who is always giving advice is numbered up the street and found the tattered hobo sitting on the curb.

"My good man," began the former, "why are you idling away your time like this? Don't you know the world owes you a living?"

"That so?" responded the hobo, nonchalantly. "Well, I give a better call up a collection agency and get down to work for me."

"But this is serious, my man. You deserve something in this world."

"Sure, boss, the last judge I ran up against said I deserved six months."

"But! But! Don't be facetious. Why, you could rise up in the world and wear broadcloth."

"Thanks, but I am wearing that now, boss. Dis suit is so broad it is three sizes too big for me."

"Well, what in the dickens are you sitting on the curb for, anyway?"

"To curb my temper, boss. To curb my temper when such smart aleaks as you ask foolish questions?"

Breaded Salad Eggs.

These delicacies are liked by almost all children old enough to eat them, and if there is any objection to the bread the eggs can be prepared without it. Boil the eggs that will be needed until they will be hard and mealy. Leave them for half an hour in cold water, then peel and cut in lengthwise slices. Scoop out the yolks and work them to a paste with olive oil or a little sour cream; add salt and a squeeze of lemon juice and then put in enough toasted crumbs, finely powdered, to make a mixture dry enough to pick up in the fingers. Stuff this in the white shells, cover each one with a sprinkle of crumbs and set in the hot box until needed. At the utmost two halves—a single egg—is enough for an eight-year-old stomach, for these eggs are very substantial.

An Irresponsible Client.

The lawyer of an unnamed Tom-borino, who was being tried for theft in the Paris courts recently, pleaded that Tom-borino was not quite accountable for his actions. This defense made the prisoner so angry that he leaped over the dock and knocked his lawyer flat on the floor of the court. The lawyer was not much hurt, but rising to his feet made use of his official violence so severely that he secured an acquittal.

Mothers will find Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup the best remedy to use for their children during the teething period.

Reasoning of Domestic Animals.

According to a French investigator domestic animals have a certain amount of reasoning, and can associate ideas from which they draw inferences. Dogs and still more so cats, he says, learn to imitate all voice and movements of their masters or mistresses. He has noticed old watchdogs which, when they barked, had a peculiar intonation, which resembled the voice of their master. Cats try, by the way in which they cry, to make their mistresses understand exactly what they want.

Seemed to Be in Line.

The small newsboy was leaning up against the wall, sobbing bitterly.

"Cheer up, my little man," said a passerby. "What's the use of crying? You may be president some day."

"I say," sobbed the little fellow, "it sure do look as if I was a-headed dat way; somebody's a-ers a-roastin' me!"

As It May Be.

"People are not alike," remarked the moralizer. "What suits one may not please another."

"Right you are," rejoined the demoralizer. "What is one man's automobile may be another man's juggernaut."

The Combustible Clive.

As long ago as the middle of the eighteenth century, a famous Georgian actress, Mrs. Kitty Clive, felt the call of the nerves commonly associated with modern women. The whole green room, according to the memoirs of "Clarissa" and his circle, "feared her tantrums."

Her character stood high, but her clean, wholesome nature and honest heart scarcely offset her temper. She was the one player Garrick feared, and he did everything he could to dispel her nerve storms, or, if they broke, assuage them. It is among the legends of the English stage that he said to her:

"I have heard of tartar and brimstone, but you are the cream of one and the flower of the other!"—Youth's Companion.

To Hang Skirt.

An easy way to hang a skirt when you are making one at home is to lay on the floor a book, the thickness of which is the desired distance of your skirt from the ground. Then put on the skirt, adjust it firmly at the waist, and stand beside the book, so that the material touches or lies over it, and turn slowly around. It is then an easy matter for a second person to turn up the hem or cut off as may be desired at the line indicated by the edge of the book and you will find your skirt perfectly level.

Demand by the Trade.

"Papa, how often have I told you not to say, 'I seen you'?"

"Now, you look here, Maggie," interrupted Uncle Charlie Seaver, laying down his knife and fork, "maybe you will make your living by good grammar and higher education; but your ma and me, we're just obliged to take in summer boarders, and they demand the dialect if they pay our rates. So what I say goes, see, whether she's grammatic or not."—Puck.

Practical Experience.

The old farmer, equipped with the tools of his trade, was busy near the road.

"What have you growing in that field," asked the innocent passer-by.

"Weeds," answered the granger.

"But why are you cultivating weeds?" queried the other.

"Because," replied the man behind the hoe, "after years of experience I am convinced that is the only way to exterminate them."

Own Up Now.

Eleanor, aged six, had been going to school only a few weeks. She had learned to raise her hand if she wanted anything. One day she put this into effect when she was sent to the chicken house to get some eggs.

Just as she reached the chicken house door her mother heard her say: "All you chickens that have laid an egg, raise your hands!"—The Delinquent.

An Embarrassing Word.

"Then," said the reporter, "I'll say several pretty songs were rendered by Miss Packer."

"Oh, gracious no!" replied the hostess; "you mustn't say 'rendered.' You see, her father made all his money in 'lard.'"—Catholic Standard and Times.

Diamond Will Indent Steel.

While the diamond is the hardest substance known it is also brittle and may be fractured by a blow. But if it is placed between two hard steel faces in a hydraulic press and a slowly accelerating pressure is applied the hard steel will become indented.

AUTO GOSSIP

San Francisco.—O. K. Parker, of Los Angeles, and family have just passed through town en route for Lake county in their Buick "40" car. The machine, which had come from Los Angeles by the coast route, was well loaded with fishing, hunting and camping outfit, besides carrying five passengers. On the way up a week was spent at Monterey in touring the surrounding drives.

After about two weeks in Lake county, during which time Parker will cover a large part of that section with the Buick, he will return to San Francisco and from here make a run to Lake Tahoe and thence back by way of the valley to Los Angeles.

The car is wearing Goodyear tires and to date not a puncture has been suffered.

In a remarkable run of thirteen days J. B. Linezey, of Denver, has just lowered the record from that city to Los Angeles by three days with a Thomas "60" car. The entire trip of 1657 miles was made without a single accident. Monogram oil was the lubricant used.

Significantly indicative of the possibilities of the smaller horsepower, light cars, is the fact that a model "T" Ford has just completed a 850 mile run from Dallas, Texas, to El Paso, Arizona, in six days, being the first machine, irrespective of size, to make the trip on its own power.

What is called "A Tour of Mystery" is the latest invention in motordom. According to advice received by the Hugo Muller Auto Co., this tour was arranged by the Premier distributors of Indianapolis for privately owned Premier cars, about fifty of which competed. The passengers, all told, totaled about 200. Only two persons in this entire party knew where the course was to lead, the only instructions given being to follow the confetti. Starting from University Park, Indianapolis, the paddler, which was one of the cars that had competed in the Glidden Tour, took out through the quaintest section of Indiana, which was dotted with little secluded Dutch hamlets, where wooden shoes and long clay pipes still did service. An interesting feature of the day was a guessing contest held just before the start of the tour as to where it would lead. Valuable prizes of auto accessories were awarded those who the most nearly guessed out the course. On the return trip a picnic in a grand old grove, where the grass was spread with a fine repast, added pleasure to the outing.

It is rumored that Harold Stone, the well known automobile driver of Southern California, is contemplating going into vaudeville with a Moline car as a stage partner. Stone seems convinced that this machine is versatile enough to go through a long course of stunts with no greater area in which to perform than the average vaudeville stage. It will be remembered that Stone, some months ago, astonished the Los Angeles motor public by taking the Moline around the little saucer motorcycle track at the Coliseum for five miles on an average of better than a mile per minute.

A notable feature of Diamond tire use this season has been the number of contesting machines in long endurance runs that have used the Diamond equipment with marked success. The St. Louis Manufacturers' and Dealers' three-day 410 mile reliability run, as far as tire equipment is concerned, afforded the usual proof of this. A total of thirty cars made the run.

A hard grueling grind from start to finish is what the newspapers said of the tour. But the bad roads only served to show Diamond tire worth. A third of the contestants made the run on Diamond equipment. The winner of the event was a National car on Diamond tires, while a Columbia on Diamonds tied for second place. Neither car had a particle of tire trouble during the entire trip.

San Francisco.—J. W. Leavitt & Co. are now preparing for the coming of the new Overland. The latest move of the company is the disposing of last year's demonstrators. These cars have been kept in such splendid condition that someone is going to secure a special bargain, for from the point of an expert, these cars are tuned to the occasion.

San Francisco.—The Frank O. Renstrom Company is in receipt of news that the Kline-Kar has added another victory to its already long list of successes for the season of 1910. The little Meteor "640," driven by C. C. Fairman of the Kline-Kar factory, came out in first place in a six-hour endurance run held at Point Breeze track, Philadelphia, last week. The distance covered was 250 miles. The Kline-Kar people anticipate building a "440" model for the season of 1911.

San Francisco.—M. D. McCoy, secretary of the Chasler & Lyon Motor Supply Co., and manager of the local branch, has just returned from Bohemian Grove, where he attended the recent high-jinks. He declares the fete one of unusual success.

San Francisco.—Advices from the factory state that two car loads of Premiers are en route to the Hugo Muller Auto Company, local distributors of these machines. The major part of these cars will go out on delivery as soon as they arrive.

San Francisco.—Fred Wagner, who has started on the transcontinental tour in an Auburn car, carries a supply of Monogram Oil. This lubricant will be used throughout the trip.

Low Death Rate in Philippines.

Any ideas that the Philippines are unhealthful as an abiding place for Americans would seem to be dispelled by the statement issued from the bureau of insular affairs that the death rate among the more than 8,000 government employees in the islands for the quarter ended March 31 was only 6.9 per 1,000 a year. These employees, of whom some 3,700 are Americans, include all the officials and employees of the insular provincial and municipal governments and the police and fire departments of Manila.

One of Many.

"Yes," boasted the self-made man, "I'm one of those chaps who never forget a favor."

"That's what you are," rejoined the party who says what he thinks. "You never forget a favor you do to any one—you never let him forget it, either."

Fashions may change, times grow better or worse, friends come or go, but old Ed Edge Winslow remains the favorite.

Why He Did It.

"So you read every word of the reports of that investigation?"

"Yes."

"And you feel benefited?"

"Unquestionably. I won my bet with the man who thought I wouldn't have the necessary nerve and endurance."

A Wary Chap.

There is a Milwaukee man who has been prosperous in business, and whose note is worth something with-in reason that he is willing to write it for.

Not so long ago he received a check from the United States government for ten dollars to his firm. He took it to the postoffice to have it cashed.

The clerk said he could cash it if the man would "indorse" it.

"Oh, no, you don't," the man answered. "I promised my partner when I went into business with him that I would never indorse any paper in the firm's name."

"Well, then, just write the name of the firm across the back; that will answer the purpose," the wily clerk persuaded.

"Sure, I'll do that," and he did.

To Keep Milk and Butter.

Place butter in a bowl or small jar and cover with a saucer; see that the bottle of milk in a rather deep pan and pour in enough cold water to half fill the pan, then fold a linen towel or piece of tablecloth twice, dip in cold water, and spread dripping wet over the bottle and bowl, with the edges of cloth in the water. Set the pan where the air can circulate. The milk will keep sweet all day and the butter will be nice when wanted even in the hottest weather.

The Place for Him.

"That French count the Simpkins girl married is coming over to this country to go in business. He can't live in France—his creditors are so annoying."

"Going into business? Why, they told me he didn't know enough to put up an umbrella when it rains. What in the world can he do?"

"Why, old Simpkins is trying to get him a continuous job at the courthouse—doing jury duty."

It's Size.

"The theme failed as a book and now it falls as a play. Yet the central idea is good."

"Quite right. I think you could bolt it down into an anecdote and get ten dollars for it."

Appetite Gone—Beware

It is a sure sign of some inward weakness when the appetite commences to lag and you have that "don't care" sort of feeling at meal-time. It is something that needs immediate attention, for neglect only brings on more trouble and often a long illness. Restore the appetite and keep it normal by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It is for Poor Appetite, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Costiveness and Malaria.

A Painful Fact.

It takes a lot of waiting to bob up precisely at the moment a certain girl comes along.

WASH FOUR TIMES A YEAR

Old Dutch Custom of Quarterly Clothes-Washing Required Immense Quantities of Linen.

Every one has heard of the German and Dutch method of accumulating soiled clothes and of having a washday only two or three times a year. Not every one realizes, perhaps, that the custom was brought over to this country from Holland and that the Dutch settlers long continued its practice. In these days of ever-ready laundry, it is strange to read of the laborious period which came to our New Amsterdam ancestors four times a year. Helen Everson Smith tells about it in "Colonial Days and Ways."

The custom of quarterly clothes-washing was maintained notwithstanding our summer heats and the immense quantities of clothes necessary to keep up the state of cleanliness required by Dutch instincts. A New Englander who had married a citizen of New York writes, in 1760, of this practice which was undoubtedly strange to her.

"Grandmother Blum is so deep in her quarterly wash this week, that she has time only to send her love."

The washing was done in an out-house called the bleekery, where the water was boiled in immense kettles, and all the other processes of the laundry work carried on. The work required was not less than a week, frequently two weeks.

During the time preceding this cruelly hard labor, the soiled clothes were accumulated in the very large hampers of open basketwork. This custom originated the necessity for the great stores of linen with which every bride was provided—Youth's Companion.

SYMBOLISM DID NOT APPEAL

Belinda Rejects Proposal of Charlie to Be Joined Together Like Hands of Clock.

"Charlie," sorrowfully sighed the young lady in the parlor of the concrete house, on Washington avenue, "it is nearly 12 o'clock."

"Yes, Belinda," was the brentling response of her poetical companion, who was sitting on the sofa beside her, "the minute hand is drawing closer and closer to the hour hand, and when the time of midnight is chanced the two hands will be even as one. Oh, darling Belinda," he continued, as he literally simulated the action of the minute hand, "may not the coming together of those two hands be symbolical of us?"

She broke away and stood firmly on her feet. "No, Charles Henry Smith," she retorted, angrily, "those two hands will remain as one but a single second, and then the minute hand will divorce itself and go on its way alone. No, Mr. Smith, a minute hand that doesn't stick isn't the kind of symbolism I want!"

Black Walnut Catsup.

Prick and lay in brine for two weeks as for pickles, exchanging the brine three times a week. Every other day drain the salt and water from the nuts; put them into a wooden tray and pound with a potato beetle into small pieces. Return to the brine. When the two weeks are up you should have when the brine is drained off—a fine black paste. Have ready this pickle: For each quart of the nut paste allow a cupful of vinegar and the same of strong brine, a tablespoonful of sugar, a teaspoonful each of onion juice and grated horseradish, two teaspoonfuls each of ground cloves and nutmeg and a tablespoonful each of ground ginger and black pepper. Mix all well together and put over the fire. Cook steadily, stirring often, for two hours. Run through a sieve, cool and bottle. Seal with beeswax and resin.

This catsup will be ready for use in six weeks, and will keep for ten years in a dark, cool place.

Well Worth the Effort.
